Virginia is for Drivers: At long last May 11 arrived and a trip that was almost a year in the making was off to the races. After last year's epic trip to Asheville, NC, we had set our collective Roundel-loving hearts on a journey to another Blue Ridge Parkway destination. This time, we pointed northward to the bucolic town of Charlottesville, VA. The home of both the University of Virginia and Thomas Jefferson's Monticello, this is a town worthy of a long weekend for some history immersion and octane therapy, in equal measure.

BMW Car Club of America Tarheel Chapter

ON THE COVER:

Interstate blast got us onto a series of lovely country roads which meandered to the State Line. Not long after, we hit our first checkpoint in the little town of Clarksville. Despite the fact we were not on the last train into town, we still managed to find our way into an Uber cute downtown area which had a lovely restaurant sitting on the side of the Roanoke River. Although we had no reservation, they easily accommodated our 14 hungry crew members. A fantastic culinary experience set us up nicely for an afternoon jaunt into the Appalachian Mountain foothills, where the balance of our clan met, bringing our car / head count to 9 and 18, respectively. Clearly, we were ready for a brilliant time. The formation included a pair of X3M40's, a Z3, a 530i, another X3, a rare 335is, and a new to the road M440i convertible. Everything to tease a Bavarian fancy.

As we approached Charlottesville, we entered on VA Route 20, known as the "Constitution Highway". As we discovered later, this road links the homes of James Monroe, Thomas Jefferson, and James Madison together with a ribbon of asphalt that complements the amazing scenery in the area. Adding to the visual delights now are all the wineries that have sprung up in the region at some point over the past 250 years. This clearly was a situation that would require more investigation as the weekend progressed. The area has a look and feel of certain parts of Sonoma in NorCal.

Arriving in what the locals call C'ville, we quickly found our designated Bed and Breakfast, parked the Bimmers, dropped the keys, and began a walkabout in town. This is, it turns out, an epic place for a fun filled weekend. Our tour of the downtown "mall" area revealed a main street that was closed off years ago, creating a sort of urban mecca with a wide walkway graced with coffee shops, restaurants, shops of wide ranges, and music. Lots and lots of street music.

As a dining club with a driving problem, it seems appropriate that our first dinner adventure in town would land us in a French experience at the appropriately named "C&O", presumably for the old Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad.

The food and the wine were wonderful, and this proved to be a prelude of what would become a routine adventure for our long weekend in Virginia: a post dinner experience on the porch or by the fireplace, regaling each other with stories of the day's adventures, or another day's experiences. This also proved to be a great place to enjoy some fine wine, some wonderful cheeses, and some truly impressive chocolate. The perfect kind of potluck experience where we'd run whatever everyone brought.

In what became a regular experience, we were awakened at 5am when the heavy freight train rolled through town with horns blaring and plenty of clickity-clackity noises on the rails. No need for an alarm clock here!

On our first day out, many found the Presidential Home of their choice and headed out to explore the history of Virginia's contribution to the creation of the United States. In this case, the "boys in the band" included giants from our nation's foundation. Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Monroe were all virtual neighbors at the start of the 19th century, with their homes now conveniently collected along the modern-day VA-20.

Perhaps least famous is Monroe's "Highlands", a stunningly beautiful property that was home to a "cabin castle" that was a summer escape for the father of the Monroe Doctrine. Relatively few visitors here meant that we had a deeply fascinating conversation with the docent.

Jefferson's Monticello is the exact opposite.

It is a spectacular gateway to tourists now, with a Visitors Center that appears to be directly lifted from a Walt Disney World property. It is a wonderful place to be sure, just with parking that gets swallowed early. They also sport a wonderful staff that keeps the crowds and the storyline moving at a good pace.

Furthest from downtown C'Ville is Madison's amazing Montpelier, about a 45-minute hop on the Constitution Route (VA-20). This road was apparently laid out by a group of engineers that were bound and determined to do as little ecological and environmental damage as possible when stretching this thin ribbon of asphalt across farm country that today sports both wineries and more traditional crops (e.g., wheat, corn). The road requires that you pay close attention to the details, but rewards you with wonderful curves that invite proper downshifting and apex hunting, with aggressive throttle application on the exits. The B58 engine in the new X3M40 we had for this adventure provides prodigious amounts of power, making this kind of "canyon carving" particularly entertaining. It surely looks like an SUV from the outside, but inside somewhere lives the soul of an M3.

Madison's home remains a remarkable place to contemplate both the creative genius which helped to frame the US Constitution and our early history as a nation, as well as some of the inherent contradictions. At both Montpelier and Monticello, the historians provide a thoughtful exploration of Enslaved Peoples who were crucial to the economic vitality of the area in the pre-Civil War era. It is a truly engaging discussion around what some have referred to as America's original sin. The honesty of the presentations was refreshing and thought provoking in equal measure.

Once away from our trips down memory lane, we also had a chance to check in on an array of local vineyards. Thomas Jefferson clearly recognized the potential of the area for producing one of his favorite beverages and he was quoted as saying "I find friendship to be like wine, raw when new, ripened with age, the true old man's milk and restorative cordial". In an effort to check on the quality of the local products, some of our number landed at Blenheim Vineyards, a property owned by Dave Matthews. Yes, that Dave Matthews (of DMB fame). It was stunning to sit on the deck, enjoy the breeze blowing down the valley, the peaks of the Appalachian Mountains in the not-far-off distance, and a charcuterie board that conveniently made its presence felt. And yes, the wine sampler was magnificent. Sampler, because of course we had to make our way back to the B&B. A bottle or three to enjoy at the next evening's fireplace outing somehow made it into the back of the BMW.

We had several other outstanding food adventures, including an evening at a lovely Italian restaurant named Orzo and a Turkish spot name Sultan Kabab. Everything was better than everything else!

Sunday morning came far, far, too soon. The weather, which had been forecast to be rainy at times, stayed surprisingly good. The one time we had monsoon conditions turned out to coincide with a lunch visit we had to the Barboursville Vineyard. It can truly be better to be lucky than good! For our drive home we were greeted with bright sun, temps in the 70's, and apparently the Carolina Blue skies we enjoy at home extend across the border to our northern neighbors. We managed to make the whole 4-hour trip home without doing a single mile on an Interstate Highway, with the X3M40 pulling a stunning 31mpg even with some moderately spirited driving. Life, as always, is better in a Bimmer! ~Robert McIsaac

May Dinner Was Epic in The Triangle

Once again, we had an opportunity in May to enjoy the culinary delights that are available at our (relatively) new targeted venue, the Driftwood Cantina at the Lafayette Village. The Mexican theme is a nice break on a Tuesday evening, with the opportunity to have a Sangria or some other adult beverage providing a great way to punctuate the evening. As we've come to expect, the staff is spot on and the food is a delight for the tastebud of all, young and old.

We have been remarkably poor at projecting the number of participants at our dinners recently, but the staff here were able to roll with the punches and adjust. For May, we had 28 Bimmer faithful join us for the festivities ... which only slightly overwhelmed the capacity of our room, which was an even two dozen. No matter as we scored another table close at hand to the balance of the group.

The technology for the room, where we had hoped to show pictures from the recent trip to Charlottesville, proved to be unable to support ogy gods were unwilling to endorse. No matter, as we had a great time just TALKING about all of our upcoming adventures. One of the things we clearly need for 2024, in addition to volunteers to lead monthly drives, are new ideas on places to venture. We got several good ones this month, including the aviation museum at Asheboro, a long weekend at Ocracoke, and a visit to the tank museum near Danville, VA. If you have an idea, or want to grab a date, please let me know!

We had several new club members this time, which gave us a terrific opportunity to welcome them to the adventure. Much to the surprise of one of them, it turned out to be their birthday! A great time was had by all as we serenaded her with a rousing rendition of the festive birthday song.

All too soon, it was time to head for home, having once again closed the restaurant for the evening. A great time was had by all ... and we have many new adventures coming up soon. We have barely returned from Virginia and yet it is almost time to pack for Pinehurst. And Asheville. Life is truly better in a Bimmer! ~Robert McIsaac

Black Mountain Challenge Driving Tour

The weeklong forecast of heavy rain for Saturday morning, the scheduled time of the inaugural Black Mountain Challenge, was quite accurate. Five a.m. brought roars of thunder, and the line of storms was passing through the Mountains region. But if the front was already here this early, then maybe things would be clear by drive time.

Sure enough, the last of the precipitation fell thirty minutes before our ten a.m. planned meetup in the city of Marion. Behind the front, dry air and a cool breeze cleared the roads quickly, and by the time we had ascended halfway up twisty route 80 on our way to the Blue Ridge Parkway, there was little sign of moisture on the pavement.

Although the forecast had, understandably, discouraged many to participate, we welcomed members from Raleigh to Saluda and cities in-between including Greensboro, Mocksville, Morganton, and Hendersonville. Our modest group of nine comprised veteran members, first-time Club participants and BMW owners, and those with a long history of BMW ownership. BMW models of choice for the tour were X7, X5 hybrid, M3, M340, 328, and M2 Competition. The X's graciously offered to bring up the rear.

Route 80 from Marion to the Parkway, a worthwhile spin in our chosen marque, is nearly ten miles of sweeping curves and, along the steeper sections near the top, numerous switchbacks. At the crest of the ridge, it is only a short drive on the Parkway to Black Mountains Overlook where there is a panoramic view of the Black Mountains Range including Mount Mitchell and the other 6000+ footers that surround it. Although the tallest peaks were well in the clouds, we chilled out at the overlook to take in the views and fresh air of the Blue Ridge, and noted the trees were yet to green. Regardless of the weather at this elevation, it's always an amazing experience. From the overlook, we retraced our steps and headed back down the mountains on 80, which is a thrilling controlled descent due to the switchbacks.

Our next challenge was Bat Cave Road (a.k.a. Old Fort Road, depending on your direction of travel – we were going toward Bat Cave) which climbs and encircles the perimeter of Round Mountain. This road is a blast and always a better alternative to the highway between Old Fort and Hendersonville. The caravan of bimmers encountered a Toyota RAV4 along part of this stretch, which had no intention of reaching the speed limit; we were elated when it pulled off. During our conversations later at lunch, the topic of the RAV4 came up: “In his defense, he probably felt like he was going 100 miles per hour”.

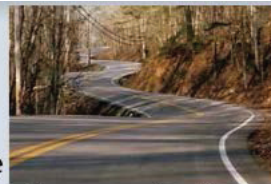

We descended from Lakey Gap through the switchbacks toward the town of Black Mountain. Again we encountered a Toyota, however this time the Prius owner looked in the rearview and promptly got those electrons flowing impressively quickly. We were not delayed getting to our lunch destination, the Black Mountain Bistro. With only two or three stray drops of rain on the route, we arrived safe and dry. The Bistro was an excellent option, with tasty entrees and great service; we all got our needed fill of grub and car talk.

Since assuming the role of driving events coordinator in the Asheville area, this is the fourth of four drives that has been affected by a rain event. I am not sure what to make of it, since I don't recall many (any) driving events affected by rain over a period of years organizing or participating in the Tidewater chapter. However, maybe I should have heeded the "warning" from one of the very first people I met when I moved to Asheville, when she said to me "Welcome to the rain forest." Rainforest or not, we will do it again. ~Darin Kwasniewski
