ON THE COVER:

RACING TO THE PIT: On a scale of 1-10, in terms of fun and adventure, February 18th would have scored an even 12 in The Triangle Area of North Carolina for the BMW faithful. While the weather can be spotty this time of year, Mother Nature clearly smiled down upon us providing bright sun, cloudless skies, and temps around 50. Doesn't get much better than that in the middle of WINTER, something that wasn't lost on Team Bimmer. By the time we were all organize for our start at the Ground's Café, in Wendell, we had 18 cars and 37 people ready to embark on adventure.

RACING TO THE PIT

Mother natures smiling down upon Bimmers roar

Two of the cars looked suspiciously like Porsches, but no matter; we quizzed the pilots, and they could spell BMW, so we were ready to roll at the appointed hour of 10am.

As always, Chef Patrick did his level best to ensure we had a hearty breakfast, on what was the first stage of what amounted to a progressive meal that ran throughout the day. We had the opportunity to lead the pack out onto the route in our trusty E36 M3, which always rises to the excitement of a new set of apexes to carve and sights to see. As the crow flies, our breakfast and lunch stops are about 10 minutes apart. Of course, as the roundels spin, it was an even 91 minutes.

Plenty of country roads in need of inspection as we crossed over through bits of three counties. Once past the suburbia edge in Wendell, we were able to rocket our way eastward in the general direction of Wilson, navigating near the edge of Buckhorn Lake, before turning south toward the tiny agricultural town of Kenly. One of the clear things happening now is that the farmland is being woken to the possibilities of another growing season. Fields are Irish Spring green with winter wheat racing skyward now.

Other fields are being tilled in prep for a spring crop of cotton, or corn, or tobacco, or beans. No rest for the farmers who make this part of NC something of a cornucopia of vegetable delights. Of course, this does mean that driving adventures need to be mindful of the possibility of encountering errant tractors, wounded pickup trucks, and other devices that spend more time playing in the dirt than traversing our highways and byways. Today, we seemed to have split a seam in the time / space continuum and had none of that to adversely impact our pace. That always increases the fun quotient for the drivers, if not the navigessors.

The roads in this part of the world were clearly laid out by people who both didn't see straight lines as their preferred geometric shape and had some humor in how they graced the countryside with ribbons of pavement. Properly banked turns allow for maintaining an appropriately brisk pace while driving around groves of trees. Bursts of straight bits culminate on hillcrests that would have made good segments in Bullitt, not that any of us were channeling our inner Clint Eastwood. Well, maybe we were channeling Clint just a little bit.

All too soon it seemed, we were back in an urban setting and navigating our way through Raleigh's warehouse district. Not so many years ago, this was the sleepy underbelly of the city to be avoided at all costs. Not any more! This is where the action is now, with clubs, arts spaces, and food emporiums gracing every nook and cranny. Walls are covered with murals, and new buildings are racing toward the skies, but with the old exterior walls of warehouse spaces kept to adorn the new buildings. It is a place that simply inspires awe at the concurrent economic, cultural, and architectural explosion taking place. For the driving club with a dining "problem", a walk-about seemed like the perfect thing to spend the afternoon doing.

Lunch was planned for "The Pit", an amazing local establishment with a long legacy of satisfied customers. We had a reservation for 20 ... they managed to accommodate 30, which was incredible given that there was also a hockey festival going on in Raleigh at the same time. Our overflow crowd headed down the street to the appropriately named "Flying Saucer", where a $20 contribution and the consumption of 200 different beers will get your name adorned on a saucer stuck on the ceiling. None of us signed up for that tour of duty today, but this is apparently a "thing" for the local urbanites. They will need a bigger place soon, apparently, since there's no more space on the ceiling!

After lunch, we reconvened as a group and toured the local chocolate factory where we had a chance to partake of amazing treats, some of which was disguised as ice cream and milkshakes. The smells of BBQ, coffee, and chocolate made this a day that challenged all of our senses by keeping them redlined with good stuff to eat and drink. Full stuffed with culinary trophies, we then headed out to check out the recently opened AMTRAK station.

This is a stunning architectural tour de force, offering an array of fascinating things to see and do. It is at the heart of the next phase of urban redevelopment planned for this city, so it will likely see more residential and commercial space spring up soon.

Our next walk-about make require even more time to savor the delights offered by the City of Oaks.

Last stop was at the new Contemporary Art Museum (CAMS), which provided a nice opportunity to delight a different set of senses as we explored painting, sculpture, and things done with light and space.

With all that behind us, it was time to spool up the roundels for a spirited ride back to the hanger. The Big Six in the M3 purred like the polished jewel she is as we blitzed our way back toward home. It was a job well done, and a day well enjoyed. Already time to start imagining what may happen next. Life is always better in a Bimmer!

Man on the Run...for Milk

A smooth ride in a clean 19 year old M3

Hard to beat a Valentine's Day Eve when the temps brush 60. Karen was busy with friends and I had an hour of surplus time where the only objective was "get milk". Grocery store is 3.2 miles away but it took every bit of that hour to make the trip.

Every milk run should clearly involve a 19-year old M3 on a nice day. Drop the top and point the nose east and see what happens. It was brilliant, and the wind burn totally worth it. No turbos here, just good ol' fashioned Teutonic oomph to provide all the excitement the heart desires. Double clutch and grab a lower cog into the stunning s-turns, pour the coal on, and blitz out past the apex in perfect harmony with nature. Then rinse and repeat into the next curvy bit.

Actually, amazingly we made it home for a conference call now that I think about it.

Milk runs are a brilliant form of octane therapy.

New Year Same Bimmer Crew

Fine dining with friends looking forward to what the new year has in store

Once again, we had a great turnout for our dinner in Raleigh on the evening of January 17. Despite the raining conditions, we still had 17 of the Bavarian faithful join us for a nice culinary experience at Farina Neighborhood Italian. Sadly, this proved to be our last dinner at this venue. The new owner no longer wants to support having our club at his establishment. Apparently, the technology challenges with their cashier systems have overwhelmed them ... and they now want us to sign a contract to have a dinner at their place. As nice as the food and environment are, this is a bridge too far!

So, we'll need to cancel dinner for February ... and come back to a new location in March. The good news is that there are several other options at the Lafayette Village location, so we may be able to still take advantage of the nice parking structure. Of course, if you'd like to suggest another venue, please let me know. From past experience, the venue needs to be on the north side of Raleigh to be of reasonable convenience to everyone in the club. North Raleigh is equally inconvenient to Chapel Hill, Clayton, and Cary, which is something that works pretty well.

Beyond the bizarre ending to our longstanding relationship with Farina, we had a great dinner, updating everyone on our driving plans for 2023. The schedule is filling in nicely and quickly! Multiple opportunities to visit VIR, a trip to Charlottesville, and a chance to see Mount Airy are all part of a great driving season to come. There's also a trip to Asheville and a Vintage Car Show experience in Pinehurst back in the rotations as well. What a wonderful year it will be.

Of course, it wouldn't have been a good dinner if we didn't have a chance to celebrate a birthday. This time around, it really was Pete Osta's anniversary of his 29th birthday and we were able to secure his favorite dessert (crème brûlée) to add to the festive note of the evening. It was a big finish to a great run with Italian cuisine. Probably a good time to explore some other food options, no matter what!

So, to be clear, our next dinner will be on Tuesday, March 21st at 6pm. Venue will be coming soon!
